Craig Hughes : How to Make Cider, Mead, Perry and Fruit Wines before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised How to Make Cider, Mead, Perry and Fruit Wines:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Waste of timeBy J. StanleyThe author focuses way too much time on where he has been and who he has met. The recipes are far too vague and everything is in metric. I thought that such a short book would be focused on detailed recipes and procedures. You will find none of that here.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. My friends seemed to enjoy it and found it helpfulBy Diane FlookThis was purchase as a gift. My friends seemed to enjoy it and found it helpful.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Not worth it...By HatterThough not a complete waste of time, I have to agree with another reviewer (J. Stanley) on the author's focus... Sitting here wishing I would have gone with another book...

This book shows how to use honey, apples, pears and garden fruits to make alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks that you can enjoy throughout the year.

About the Author Craig Hughes has been making fruit wines, perry and cider for a good number of years and uses his own honey to make fantastic mead. As well as being owner of and head apiarist at Crossmoor Honey, with over 30 years experience of keeping bees, he is also a qualified and classically trained chef. He is co-author of Country Skills and Crafts.
