covers the gambit of small to big boys of brewing! It has maps and even talks about the flagship beers from every location. I love to try micro brews and visiting local breweries is a passion, if you are the same this book is worth it! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. son had on wish list enjoyedBy linda hoxieArrived as advised, son had on wish list enjoyed it0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Mountain BrewBy David L CooperI like the book -- it has some interesting information, but a little disappointed where it doesn't always indicate if food is served. I have visited 35 of the over 100 breweries in Colorado and like to go where they serve food, if it's near a meal time. I'm still glad I bought the book.

Colorado is the scene of a thriving culture of breweries. From Coors, America's largest single-site brewery, to Three Barrel Brewing Company, found in the back of an insurance office, each and every one holds a unique place in the state's brewing scene. For two years, author Ed Sealover traveled the state, speaking to more than one hundred brewers and learning what makes each place special, detailing their histories, quirks and signature beers. With profiles of breweries ranging from the world-renowned New Belgium Brewing Company to the Silverton Brewery, whose location is so isolated that its taproom shuts down six months out of the year, Mountain Brew: A Guide to Colorado's Breweries is a perfect companion for beer geeks and thirsty travelers.

"The Sealovers were rewarded for their travels with memories and experiences to savor for a lifetime, and they've rewarded readers of "Mountain Brew" with 224 pages of useful and entertaining knowledge about Colorado's love of beer and the people who make it." --Patrick Malone, The Pueblo Chieftain "...not just a guide to Colorado's breweries, but THE guide to the state's best microbreweries...The guide offers details how some are made and how others came into being. It's a living history of beer, past and present, and hints to where the budding industry may head in the future." --Charles Ashby, The Daily Sentinel

About the AuthorEd Sealover has worked as a reporter for daily and weekly newspapers since 1993, including the Rocky Mountain News and Colorado Springs Gazette. He now reports for the Denver Business Journal, covering subjects ranging from state government to the brewing industry. Throughout his career, he's won twenty-six journalism awards in five states in categories including public service reporting, political reporting, investigative reporting and feature writing. He received his bachelor of science in journalism in 1995 from Northwestern University.
